

Special Issue

Indigenous marriage, family and kinship in Australia: the persistence of life and hope in colonial and neo-colonial contexts

Guest Editor: Victoria Grieves

Co-editor: Martina Horáková

CONTENTS

Victoria Grieves

Introduction. We are survivors: the persistence of life and hope in Aboriginal marriage, family and kinship practices

Victoria Grieves

“We are survivors”*: a play by Puralia Jim Everett

Jim Everett

We Are Survivors

Kathleen Butler

Into the Photo Box: An alternative way of approaching the Aboriginal family

John Boulton

Reading Coolibah’s Story: As told by Coolibah to John Boulton

Jeanie Bell

The persistence of Aboriginal kinship and marriage rules in Australia: Adapting traditional ways into modern practices

Karen Hughes

Becoming Rosalind’s daughter: Reflections on intercultural kinship and embodied histories

Kim Burke and Victoria Grieves

My grandfather’s family secrets: unravelling layers of race and belonging in an Australian mixed-race family

Pauline Marsh

Family tremors: Margot Nash’s Call Me Mum

Victoria Grieves and Paulette Whitton

“All my rels”*: Aunty June Barker speaks of her family history

Martina Horáková

Tracking precarious lives in Stephen Kinnane's Shadow Lines

Clare Britton

Posts in a Paddock: revisiting the Jimmy Governor tragedy, approaching reconciliation and connecting families through the medium of theatre

Estelle Castro

'Behind every suffering, there is a human life worth loving': receptions and perceptions of uniqueness, universality and hope in Warwick Thornton's Samson and Delilah

Marcus Waters

Nurturing the "beginning" in protecting our traditional practices from the end: family, kinship and Kamilaroi Aboriginal First Nation knowledge in Australia

Book Reviews

Iva Polak

Margie West, ed., Yulyurlu: Lorna Fencer Napurrurla (2011)

Victoria Grieves

Nancy de Vries, Gaynor Macdonald, Jane Mears and Anna Nettheim, One Life, Two Stories: Nancy de Vries' journey home (2012)

Matt Poll

Patti Miller, The Mind of a Thief (2012)